

NVIDIA Names Donald Robertson as Chief Accounting Officer

NVIDIA today announced that it has named Donald Robertson as vice president and chief accounting officer, reporting to Colette Kress, executive vice president and chief financial officer, effective June 17.

Robertson, age 50, will be responsible for accounting and controllership, financial reporting, payroll and Sarbanes-Oxley controls. He succeeds Michael Byron, who will take on the new role of vice president of finance, operations and systems.

Robertson most recently served as vice president of finance and chief accounting officer at Western Digital Corp. and previously was vice president and chief accounting officer for SanDisk Corp.

He graduated from the University of California, San Diego, with a B.A. in quantitative economics and decision sciences, and received an M.S. in accounting from San Jose State University. Robertson is also a certified public accountant.

About NVIDIA

NVIDIA's (NASDAQ: NVDA) invention of the GPU in 1999 sparked the growth of the PC gaming market, redefined modern computer graphics and revolutionized parallel computing. More recently, GPU deep learning ignited modern AI — the next era of computing — with the GPU acting as the brain of computers, robots and self-driving cars that can perceive and understand the world.
